Zoom Groom

by Nancy Furstinger
illustrated by Jackie Snyder

On a moonlit night glittering with dew, a poodle named Scooter said, “I am bored with howling at the moon. I am going to open a new grooming shop.”

The pooch turned his playroom into a shop called Zoom Groom. His shop had pools and seats for grooming. It had places for dogs to sit and wait.

He stocked his storeroom with crates of shampoo, brushes, and a broom. Scooter could now open his shop.

Soon Scooter's Zoom Groom was packed with dirty pooches.
He got set to brush and clean every one of them.

“Step right this way,” Scooter boomed. He tossed lots of shampoo into the pool.

The pooches jumped into the bubbles with whoops and yells. How soon could Scooter get them all clean?

Scooter groomed every pooch before noon.
As they zoomed out, he said, “This is why I call my shop Zoom Groom!”
